

Today we continued our series in Mark's gospel considering, at the cross both the breadth and depths of humanity, as well as the plan of God.

- Where do you see yourself in this account? Which character(s) do you most resonate with and why?
- Do you agree with the quote that Dan used "The cross is proof positive that faced with his maker mankind will seek to kill him"? Why or why not?
- We noted that even in the mess and the murkiness of this chapter, God is still very much at work. Where do you see glimpses of light in the darkness? Why should they bring us hope?
