

Some questions for your group to consider

This week at MRC we started a new short series considering ways in which as believers there can be an inconsistency (a disconnect) between what we say is true, and how we live. The message of our mouths and the message of our lives may not tell the same story.

In Gal 2v14 Paul challenges Peter because he is living at odds with the gospel of grace and so Paul confronts him. We're to be as pliable as we can be, but when the life-giving gospel message is challenged it's right that we don't shift.

Why do you think we're inconsistent in life?

How does that work out in daily living?

How does that work out in our faith?

We noted for applications from this verse

1. Know that your actions impact others
 - our actions tell a story to those watching. Who's watching our lives and where might our witness not match up with our beliefs?
2. Know that (at times) we might need to challenge -
 - How can we get better at kindly challenging where needed?
3. Know we need to keep reforming -
 - Are there any areas of your life that you feel might be inconsistent? How does the gospel of grace shape our response?
4. Know that it's Christ's life within us -
 - Have a look at Gal 2v20. How does this verse help us in the act of reformation?
